KEARNY MESA / ZIP CODES: 92111, 92123

THE VIBE:

This centrally located area hopes to make exciting changes over the next few years. But what will never change is the fact that it's conveniently circumscribed by the 52, 15, and 805, with the 163 running through the middle. It's also a big job center, with companies like Northrop Grumman and the Jack in the Box corporate headquarters, so if you live nearby in the enclave known as Spectrum, you can bike to work. Spectrum stands in the area once owned by General Dynamics (north of Tech Way, between Ruffin and Kearny Villa roads) and is now a mix of retail and homes from different developers.

HOUSING:

Several phases of new townhomes and tri-level condos are sold out, although individuals sell them in the mid-$400s and $500s. Ariva's fourth phase of apartments are scheduled to be available to rent this May or June—prepare to pay upward of $1,800 and make three times the rent. Residents are professionals in their late 30s to 50s. (Read: no students. It's quiet.)

FOOD FOR THOUGHT:

Nearby Convoy Street, the city's hub for Asian cuisine, is gaining popularity, with new favorites like Pokirrito. Business owners have long hoped to make it the next Little Italy: more walkable, so you can stroll from your ramen dinner to karaoke, but also adding more than 200 angled parking spaces on side streets. The annual San Diego Night Market, which attracted more than 20,000 people last year, will take place again this spring and include even more food vendors.

GETTING AROUND:

Councilmember Chris Cate says there are plans to spruce up Montgomery-Gibbs Executive Airport, get more types of flights, and take on some of the business currently going through McClellan-Palomar. Also on the docket is traffic signal optimization along Balboa Avenue; Qualcomm tried it on Lusk Boulevard and wait times were reduced by 24 percent. Cate is working to invest in more plans like these in the future. Green light!
